SECTION A.—Mathematical and Physical Science.—President's Address, 236. Report of the Eclipse Committee.—Birt's Report on Lunar Objects suspected of Change.—Schuster on the Spectrum of Hydrogen.—Forbes on Astronomical Refraction, 237. Strutt on the Application of Photography to Copy Diffraction Gratings.—Gaffield on the Action of Sunlight on Colourless and Coloured Glass.—Hopkinson on a Nautical Photometer.—Thomson on Relations between the Gaseous, the Liquid, and the Solid States of Matter, 238. Report of the Committee on Mathematical Tables.—Thomson on Atmospheric Refraction of Inclined Rays, and on the Path of a Level Ray.—Babbage on Mirages in Australia.—Report of the Tidal Committee.—Thomson on a Tidal Watch.—Jansen on the Last Solar Eclipse, 270. Report of the Committee on Underground Temperature.—Report of the Rainfall Committee.—Phillips on the Temperature Correction of the Aneroid.—Tait's Experiment on the Sympathy of Pendulums.—Dines on a New Hygrometer.—König on Musical Beats and Resultant Tones.—Janssen on a Thermometer for Taking the Temperature of Surface Water in Rivers or Wells.—Barrett on the Spheroidal State of Liquids.—Carpenter on the Thermal Circulation of the Ocean, 271.

SECTION B.—Chemical Science.—Report of the Committee for Investigating the Chemical Constitution and Optical Properties of Essential Oils used for Perfumes.—Mallet on Fused Arsenic and Meteoric Iron.—Roberts on the Alloy of the Present Gold Coinage.—Carpenter on the Methods of Collecting Samples of Deep-Sea Water.—Thorpe on a New Fill Pump.—Moffatt on the Results of Observations made by the Tube Ozone-meter.—Report of the Committee appointed to Investigate the Trustworthiness of Siemens's Electrical Pyrometer.—Report of the Committee for Superintending the Monthly Report on the Progress of Chemistry.—Dewar on the Specific Heat of Bodies at High Temperatures, with particular Reference to that of Carbon.—Tribes on the Mutual Helpfulness of Chemical Affinity, Heat, and Electricity, in producing the Decomposition of Water.—Weldon on his Method of Preparing Chlorine, 238. Tribes on the Precipitation of Silver by Copper, 271. Carpenter on the Presence of Albumen in Fats, and on a New Method of Obtaining Stearic and Palmitic Acids.—Wood on the Teaching of Elementary Chemistry.—Cooper on the Prevention of Fermentation in Sewage, 272.

SECTION C.—Geology.—President's Address, 239. Hull on the Raised Beach of the North-East of Ireland.—Howell on the Super-Cretaceous Formation in the Neighbourhood of Brighton.—Topley on the Sub-Wealden Exploration.—Godwin-Austen on the Coal-Fields of Western Europe.—Lebour on the Geological Distribution of Goltre in England.—Report on Kent's Cavern, Torquay.—Carpenter on the Temperature and other Physical Conditions of Inland Seas, considered in reference to Geology, 240. Excursion to East Cliff.—Hébert on the Upper Cretaceous Formation of France and England, 241. Thomson on Mountain Limestone Corals.—Byrce on Earthquakes in Scotland.—Jolly on the Discovery of Fossils in certain Remote Parts of the North-West Highlands.—Nicholson on the Geology of Thunder Bay and Shabedowan Mining Districts, on the North Shore of Lake Superior.—Nicholson on Ortonia, a New Genus of Fossil Tubular Annelides.—Nicholson on Silicified Trees near Colorado City.—Tristram on the Geology of Moab, 272. Hull on the Trachyte Porphyries of Counties Antrim and Down.—Hall on the occurrence of Trunks of Paronius in an Ercet Position, resting on their Original Bed, in Rocks of Devonian Age, in the State of New York.—Hall on the Geographical Distribution of the Middle and Upper Silurian Formations in the United States.—Davidson on the Present State of our Knowledge in connexion with the Brachiopoda.—Woodward's Sixth Report on Fossil Crustacea.—Davidson and King on the Genera Trimerella, Dinobolus, and Monomella.—Gunn on the Prospect of Finding Productive Coal-Measures in Norfolk and Suffolk.—G. von Rath on a Remarkable Block of Lava.—Dawkins on the Physical Geography of the Mediterranean during the Pleistocene Age.—Moore on the Presence of Naked Echinodermata in Oolitic and Liassic Beds.—Hall on Copper-Bearing Rocks in Connecticut, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania.—Judd on the Discovery of Cretaceous Rocks in the Islands of Mull and Inch Kenneth.—Readwin on the Coal and Iron Mines of the Arigna District of the Connaught Coal-Measures, Ireland, 273.

SECTION D.—Biology.—Department of Zoology and Botany.—President's Address, 241. Bate on the Fauna of South Devon.—Newton on Further Researches respecting the Recently Extinct Birds of the Mascarene Islands.—Dohrn on Zoological Stations.—Robertson on the Perforating Instrument of Pholias Candida, 242. Jeffreys on the Mollusca of Europe and East and North America.—Whiteaves on Dredging in the Gulf of St. Lawrence.—Allman on the Structure and Development of Mitralia.—Hayne on the Flora of Moab.—Report of the Close River Committee, 243. Newton on the Act for the Preservation of Wild Fowl.—Mossbridge on a Curious Elm in Kensington Gardens.—Van Beneden on Bones of small Extinct Cetaceans from Antwerp Crag, 244. Lubbock on a Tame Wasp.—Cail on a Salmon Pass.—Gulich on Diversity of Evolution under Uniform External Conditions.—Hemley on the Flora of Sussex.—Allman on the Structure of Edwardsia, Cyphonautes, and Nottulca.—Allman on the Development of Vorticellidae.—Dickson on a Series of Cones of Pinus Pinaster.—Spalding's Experiments on Instinct, 274. Mott on the Scientific Value of Beauty.—Peacock on Natural History Museums—Sclater on the Osteocella—Carruthers on a Radiolarian Rhizopod from the Coal-Measures—Dyer on threatened Injury to the Vine by the Phylloxera vastatrix, 275

Department of Anthropology.—President's Address, 242.
 Greenwell on the Barrows or Tumuli scattered over the Wolds of Yorkshire, 243, 276. Bate on some Tumuli on Dartmoor—Jones on Stone and Bone Implements from Caves in the Valley of the Vézère, in Dordogne—King on a Flint Implement Station near Sandhurst—Threatened Destruction of Prehistoric Remains at Stonehenge, 243. Wake on the Origin of Serpent Worship—Clarke on the Classification of the Languages of the Caucasus—Evans on the Origin of Alphabets—Atkinson on the Nomenclature of Cleveland, 244.
